Life in a Kenyan village

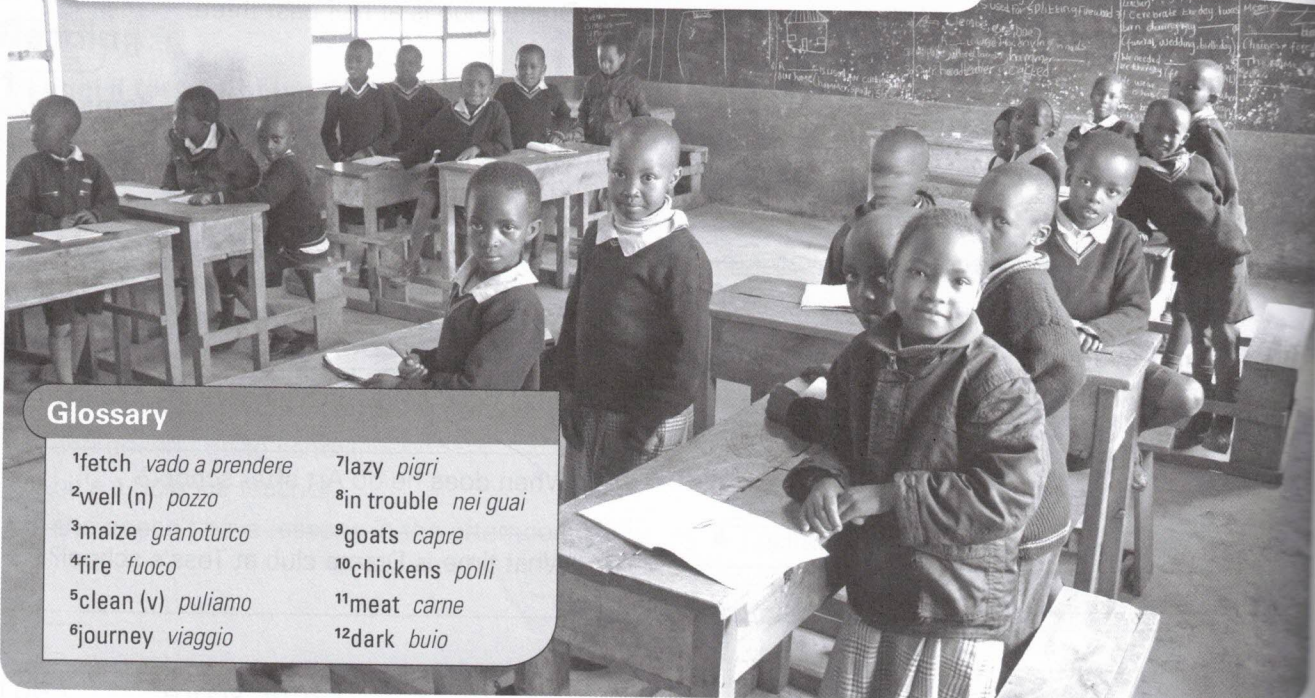

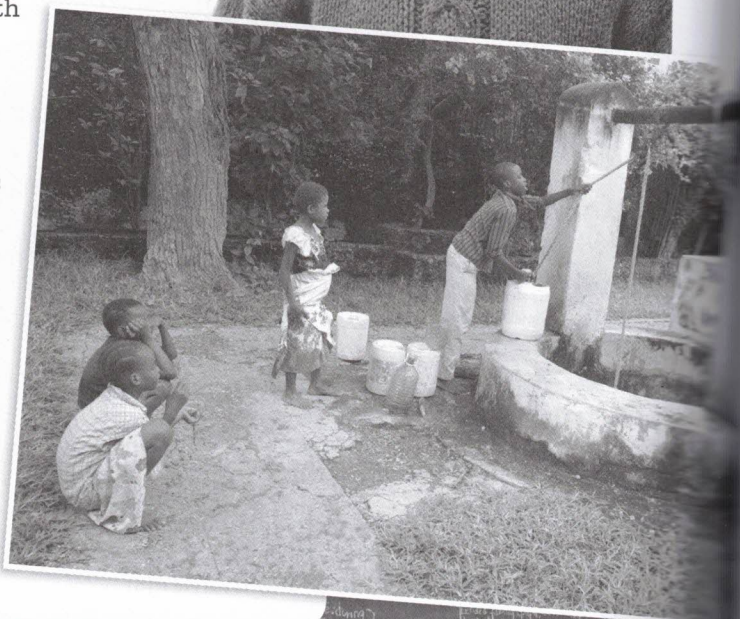

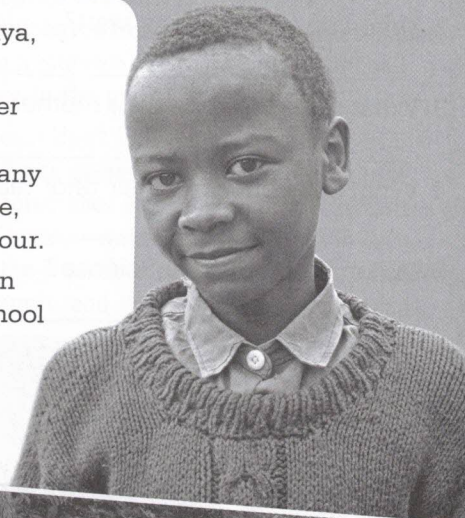

My name's Benjamin and I'm 12. I live in a small village in Kenya, in Africa with my parents and my sister.

Every day we get up very early, and my sister and I fetch¹ water from the village well². We usually have maize³ for breakfast. Our mother cooks it on a fire⁴ in the house because there isn't any electricity in our village. After breakfast we all clean⁵ the house, then my sister and I walk to school. The journey⁶ is about an hour.

All Kenyan children go to primary school. We start school when we are 6 and we leave primary school when we are 13. Our school is nice. It hasn't got any electricity, but it's got desks, chairs, pencils and paper. Our teacher, Mr Mutai, is a good teacher, but he doesn't like lazy⁷ students! My friend Joseph doesn't always do his homework, so he's often in trouble⁸! At break time at school I play football and volleyball with my friends.

I'm good at Maths, and I want to go to secondary school next year. Parents in Kenya don't pay for primary school, but secondary school is expensive. I don't know if my parents have got the money for it.

When lessons finish, we clean the school for the next day. We walk home, and then I help our father with the animals. We've got goats⁹ and chickens¹⁰. My sister helps our mother to make dinner. When we're at school, our mother fetches more water, and she walks to market three times a week to buy food. We sometimes have meat¹¹ for dinner, but not very often. After dinner I play with the children from the village. We go to bed when it's dark¹².
